

Government Market Systems

The complete guide: philosophy, scope, tiers, and what happens at every phase.

This is the full reference for how AK Randall Digital helps vendors identify, qualify, and pursue business-to-government opportunities — including the reasoning behind the scope, tier structure, and boundaries we hold. Read it end to end, or jump to the section you need.

[PHOTO — government facility, procurement office, or team at work]

IN THIS GUIDE

01 — Overview & Philosophy

02 — Why This Matters

03 — How We Think About B2G

04 — Tiers in Depth

05 — What's Not Included

06 — How It Works, Phase by Phase

01

Overview & Philosophy

Government Market Systems work helps vendors find, structure, and win business-to-government revenue that's often sitting in plain sight — cooperative purchasing vehicles, open solicitations, and buying patterns most vendors never systematically track. Delivery starts with an audit of where opportunity is actually being lost, then scales into ongoing capture support for companies with real pipeline.

The approach is deliberately staged, and each tier is genuinely usable on its own — the audit isn't a sales pitch for the retainer, it's a standalone deliverable that pays for itself in recovered pipeline. Embedded capture support, at the top of the range, is something we scope only once a vendor has a track record to build on, because that tier requires trust we haven't yet earned on day one of a relationship.

02

Why This Matters

Government and cooperative purchasing is one of the most reliable revenue channels available to vendors positioned to access it — and one of the least understood. Vendors without a system for tracking cooperative vehicles like GSA, TIPS, or H-GACBuy routinely lose opportunities they were qualified to win, simply because no one was watching for them, or a proposal calendar slipped.

Unlike private-sector sales, a missed government opportunity often can't be recovered later in the cycle — the vehicle closes, the solicitation clock runs out, and it's gone. The cost of not solving this isn't slower growth, it's revenue that quietly expires on a calendar nobody was watching.

03

How We Think About B2G

Three things shape how we scope every capture engagement:

- Most lost opportunities were never actually lost to a competitor.
They were lost to nobody watching the vehicle or the calendar. The audit exists to find those before assuming the market itself is the problem.
- Cooperative vehicles reward the vendors who track them consistently.
GSA, TIPS, H-GACBuy and similar programs move on their own schedules — showing up sporadically means showing up too late, consistently.
- Capture support improves odds — it doesn't manufacture a track record.
We're direct about this because it shapes what tier makes sense: Custom-level embedded capture requires wins already on the board.

These are operating principles drawn from how we scope engagements, not third-party research citations — we'd rather tell you plainly how we think than dress up a generic statistic as if it were specific to your business.

04

Tiers in Depth

	Starter — Revenue Flow Audit	Growth — Fractional BD Support	Custom — Embedded Capture Partner
BEST FOR	A vendor unsure where opportunities are being lost	Real pipeline that needs structure, not headcount	Someone to run the entire B2G motion
DELIVERS	Pipeline audit, vehicle mapping, lost-opportunity analysis, action report	Opportunity research, proposal calendar, capture planning, monthly reporting	Full capture management, proposal writing, compliance, post-award handoff
FEE MODEL	Fixed fee	Monthly retainer + success fee	Not currently quotable

EMBEDDED SUPPORT IS AVAILABLE AFTER AN INITIAL ENGAGEMENT ESTABLISHES FIT, CAPACITY, AND A WORKING BASELINE

Nearly every relationship starts with the Revenue Flow Audit — it's a fixed-fee, standalone deliverable, and the findings usually make the case for Fractional BD Support on their own, rather than us needing to argue for it separately.

05

What's Not Included

- Proposal graphic design or desktop publishing beyond written content. We write and structure the proposal; formatted design production is separate.
- Legal or contract review of awarded agreements. Have counsel review any resulting contract terms.
- Guaranteed award outcomes. Capture support improves odds; it does not guarantee wins.
- Subcontractor or teaming-partner sourcing beyond strategic recommendations. We advise on teaming strategy; sourcing the actual partners is the vendor's own outreach.
- Registration or certification filing itself. SAM.gov registration and socio-economic certifications are the vendor's own filings; we'll flag when they're relevant.

Final scope, exclusions, responsibilities, and third-party costs are confirmed in the written proposal for each engagement.

A FEW QUESTIONS WE GET

"Can you guarantee we'll win?"

No — we improve positioning and process, but no one can guarantee a government award.

"We have no past performance yet — can we start at Custom?"

Not yet — Custom requires a track record. Starter or Growth is the right entry point.

"Do you handle our SAM.gov registration?"

We'll flag when it's needed, but the filing itself stays with the vendor.

06

How It Works, Phase by Phase

● 01

Map

We map the vendor's current pipeline against the cooperative vehicles and solicitation sources relevant to what they sell, flagging where opportunities have been missed.

From you: access to current opportunity records and any past bid history.

● 02

Design

Findings become a prioritized action plan — or, at Growth, an ongoing capture and vehicle strategy — scoped to the vendor's actual capacity to pursue new work.

From you: a realistic read on internal bandwidth to pursue new work.

● 03

Build

At Growth and Custom, proposals and capture plans get built pursuit by pursuit, with a proposal calendar keeping every deadline in view.

From you: technical/pricing input specific to each pursuit.

● 04

Operate

Reporting keeps the vendor informed of where each pursuit stands; at Custom, support continues through award and into post-award handoff.

From you: time for monthly review of reporting.

WHO THIS IS FOR

Vendors with real product-market fit for government buyers who need the pipeline and process to actually win it.

NOT A FIT IF

You have no existing past performance and are looking for a guaranteed contract win.

Starter: fixed fee. Growth: monthly retainer + success fee. Custom: not currently available.